N.B.—Regiments on passage out and home are included with the numbers "ABROAD."

* The increase in the average strength of the Army during this year is due to the Mobilisation of the First Class Army and Militia Reserves during three months of the period.

† In addition to these a force of Militia of an average strength of 5,352 of all ranks was embodied during a portion of the year.

* By the Army Enlistment Act of 1867, men were permitted to re-engage after completing two-thirds of their first term of service, and by Royal Warrant of 29th June 1867 the soldiers' pay was increased by twopence per diem, with a further penny a day on re-engagement.

† By the Army Enlistment Act of 1870, re-engagements were restricted to men in the last year of their first period of service, and by Royal Warrant dated 2nd June 1870 the extra pay of a penny a day on re-engagement was discontinued, and the scale of good-conduct pay revised. These restrictions do not apply to men enlisted under the Acts of 1847 and 1867. See Army Circular, 1872 (clause 111).

‡ By Royal Warrant of 27th February 1869, re-engagements after discharge were ordered to be discontinued. This restriction was withdrawn by Army Circular, 1875 (clause 109), and again revived by Army Circular, 1877 (clause 58).

§ A gratuity authorised to certain classes of men to extend their service (Army Circular, 1883, clause 111).

‖ A gratuity authorised to certain classes of men in India to extend their service (Indian Army Circular, 30 July 1883).

N.B.—By Army Circular, 1876 (clause 59), the reward for the detection of deserters fraudulently enlisting into the Army was raised from 10*s.* to 1*l.*

* The reduction in the number "rejoined from desertion" may in part be attributed to the action of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, whereby men who are discovered to have fraudulently enlisted are tried for that offence and dealt with in the corps into which they have fraudulently enlisted, instead of being relegated to their former corps and tried for desertion.

† Including men who received the Queen's pardon under General Order 102 of 1887.

N.B.—The small per-centage of desertions during 1870 is accounted for by the fact that the majority of the recruits were raised during the latter part of the year. As deserters were not struck off the strength of regiments until after an absence of two months, in many cases they would not be reported till the subsequent year.

By General Order 7 of 1872 the period of absence after which a soldier is struck off the strength of his regiment as a deserter was reduced from two months to 21 days.

* The increase in the nett loss from desertion may in part be attributed to the action of the Army Act, whereby men who are discovered to have fraudulently enlisted are tried for that offence and dealt with in the corps into which they have fraudulently enlisted, instead of being relegated to their former corps and tried for desertion.

* The increase in the average strength of the Army during this year is due to the Mobilisation of the First Class Army and Militia Reserves during three months of the period.

† In addition to these a force of Militia of an average strength of 5,352 of all ranks was embodied during a portion of the year.

† By the Army Enlistment Act of 1870, re-engagements were restricted to men in the last year of their first period of service, and by Royal Warrant dated 2nd June 1870 the extra pay of a penny a day on re-engagement was discontinued, and the scale of good-conduct pay revised. These restrictions do not apply to men enlisted under the Acts of 1847 and 1867. See Army Circular, 1872 (clause 111).

‡ By Royal Warrant of 27th February 1869, re-engagements after discharge were ordered to be discontinued. This restriction was withdrawn by Army Circular, 1875 (clause 109), and again revived by Army Circular, 1877 (clause 58).

§ A gratuity authorised to certain classes of men to extend their service (Army Circular, 1883, clause 111).

‖ A gratuity authorised to certain classes of men in India to extend their service (Indian Army Circular, 30 July 1883).

N.B.—By Army Circular, 1876 (clause 59), the reward for the detection of deserters fraudulently enlisting into the Army was raised from 10*s.* to 1*l.*

* The reduction in the number "rejoined from desertion" may in part be attributed to the action of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, whereby men who are discovered to have fraudulently enlisted are tried for that offence and dealt with in the corps into which they have fraudulently enlisted, instead of being relegated to their former corps and tried for desertion.

† Including men who received the Queen's pardon under General Order 102 of 1887.

N.B.—On the 1st January 1871 the heading of column 5 was changed to "Number of better education," and on the 1st January 1873 it was again altered, and now stands as follows, viz., "Number who are better educated, i.e., all who are not included in foregoing columns."

* These numbers are only approximate, as under the provisions of General Order 198, of 1887, it is not compulsory for recruits to attend school, and accurate numbers under these headings are not therefore obtainable.

† See Table 67, for numbers reported by Director-General of Military Education for 1st January 1891.

N.B.—Regiments on passage out and home are included with the numbers "ABROAD."

* The increase in the average strength of the Army during this year is due to the Mobilisation of the First Class Army and Militia Reserves during three months of the period.

† In addition to these a force of Militia of an average strength of 5,352 of all ranks was embodied during a portion of the year.

N.B.—General Order 34 of 1874 defined the proportions in which Recruits for long and short service respectively were permitted to be enlisted for the several arms of the service.

Under General Orders 51 of 1874 and 53 of 1875 recruits for the Royal Artillery and Foot Guards were permitted to be enlisted for long and short service indiscriminately.

Under Army Circular 1874 (Cl. 67) short service in the Cavalry, Artillery, and Engineers consisted of 8 years in the ranks and 4 years with the reserve, and in the Infantry and Army Service Corps of 6 years in the ranks and 6 years with the reserve.

Under General Order 18 of 1878 all enlistments for Infantry of the Line, except men specially enlisted and boys under 16 years of age, were to be for short service.

N.B.—By Army Circular, 1876 (clause 59), the reward for the detection of deserters fraudulently enlisting into the Army was raised from 10*s.* to 1*l.*

* The reduction in the number "rejoined from desertion" may in part be attributed to the action of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, whereby men who are discovered to have fraudulently enlisted are tried for that offence and dealt with in the corps into which they have fraudulently enlisted, instead of being relegated to their former corps and tried for desertion.

† Including men who received the Queen's pardon under General Order 102 of 1887.

N.B.—On the 1st January 1871 the heading of column 5 was changed to "Number of better education," and on the 1st January 1873 it was again altered, and now stands as follows, viz., "Number who are better educated, i.e., all who are not included in foregoing columns."

* These numbers are only approximate, as under the provisions of General Order 198, of 1887, it is not compulsory for recruits to attend school, and accurate numbers under these headings are not therefore obtainable.

† See Table 67, for numbers reported by Director-General of Military Education for 1st January 1892.
